

Igniting Creativity At Home & Offering Art Relief for All

Young At Art Museum's new multi-platform at-home art engagement program YAA At Home is designed to keep families artistically engaged with opportunities to get creative together or keep their children occupied with stimulating activities while schools, childcare centers and businesses remain closed. Through a dedicated web page, bi-weekly email blasts, social media campaigns and promotion via media art world partners, YAA aims to create an uplifting, interactive experience for the community by offering Virtual 360° tours of the museum's unique galleries, downloadable art activities by prominent guest artists and videos by the Young At Art Institute with in-depth art projects to help close the gap in lost arts education during this unprecedented time. All of this is being offered for free at www.youngatartmuseum.org/yaaathome.php

Sponsorship of this program will help fund the ongoing creation of this engaging content while the public is looking for ways of continuing their children's creativity and development outside of school as well as general programming that the museum will continue once safe to reopen to visitors. It will also allow YAA to fund its community initiatives which are currently on hold and will continue to serve over 10,000 children and families in our community once the museum is able to restart them again. After the museum is able to reopen YAA At Home will also continue and be adapted to the creative needs of our community.

Virtual, 360° imaging of each immersive gallery within Young At Art Museum is being captured and uploaded to offer the public the ability to explore YAA's unique spaces and exhibitions from their desktop and mobile or virtual reality device. Interactive content is being embedded throughout each 3-dimensional space for families to discover, giving them background information about the gallery or additional activities they can do at home in relation to the exhibit. Each week new exhibits are being posted and highlighted with new content throughout.

Original art activities are being designed by acclaimed local and international artists to be published for the public twice a week. Each activity can be downloaded as a printable .pdf and, depending on the artists, may include a video example prize or special collaborative aspect. The public is encouraged to submit the artwork they create in response to the activity to be highlighted on YAA's social media platforms in an exhibition of the community's collective creativity.

Each week the Young At Art Institute will post an in-depth art activity video teaching children to create art using easily sourced materials from around the house as well as professional art terms, methods and techniques. Segments will include Story & Art Time with Ms. Marie for early childhood participants, At Home Studio Time with Ms. Sue where kids and parents can create art using recycled materials and Digital Media Slam with Ms. Simona to engage teens with digital art demonstrations and tutorials. Creations made from these videos by the public will be featured on YAA's social media platforms.
